THE ENQUIRER.

LITCHFIELD, APRIL 4, 1839.

Old Litchfield right side up again! After the most exciting and turbulent election ever held in this town, the Whigs on Monday last came gloriously out of the contest. The most foul and bas means were resorted to by the loco tocos-even brute force-to intimidate and browbeat some of the electors, and prevent them from exercising their own sound judgment, yet have the whigs carried a handsome majority on every branch of their ticket. At the close of such an exciting contest, in which we acknowledge that we personally are almost as much used up as our adversaries are politically, we do not feel a disposition to say a great deal about what has taken place, but may take another opportunity to make some observations respecting the manner in which our opponents have conducted this contest. The following is the vote of this town: For first Representative Dr. Samuel Buel, (whig) Origen S. Seymour, (loco) Scattering, For second Representative. William Ray, Origen S. Seymour, Scattering, For Governor. Ellsworth, For State Senator. Abernethy, Phelps, 441 For Sheriff. Sedgwick,

The remainder of the State Ticket about the same as for Governor.

Glorious Triumph!

The State and Congressional Elections. We are happy to be able to announce to our readers the triumphant success of the State, Congression al, and Sheriff nominations in this county. TRUMAN SMITH, Esq., against whom the vials of loco foco vituperation and falsehood have been poured out to the very dregs, has been most triumphantly sustained by the Whigs, and is elected to Congress by a majority of 500 votes, where his defamers pretended to believe they could defeat him by nearly that number-a result as gratifying to his friends as it must be mortifying to his enemies. Nay, from the very ranks of the loco focos has an occasional honest man been found who has stamped the lies of their own party with the brand of their disapprobation-for it will be seen from the returns below that Mr. Smith runs ahead of his own party vote for Governor. Votes for Member of Congress and Governor.

We have chosen two out of the three Senators in this county, Messrs. Andrew Abernethy and Nathaniel P. Perry, but are sorry to sav, that through the mad folly of some 30 or 40 whig abolitionists, Mr. Buckingham is defeated in the 16th district by 15 votes. They scratched off his name, and by that means a loco is chosen, who we understand has repeatedly declared his utter abhorrence of abolition principles, and will go the whole length of the "Atherton gag."

SHERIFF. Sedgwick's majority over Powell is the greatest of any in the county. We give the vote, together with those for Senators.

$3 Sharon is the only town in the county from which we had not full returns at 12 o'clock on Monday night-and from that town we have only rumors yet as to the vote for Member of Congress, &c. Although we have accounts from Stamford, and Groton, and Thompson, in remote parts of the State, not a word from Sharon, on a public mail route, only 20 miles distant. Why should all our friends there be or good garden earth-gently pressed down with the

VICTORY FULL AND COMPLETE:

The State wholly Redeemed! By the Daily Courant of Tuesday, which we received in the afternoon on the return of our express that left Monday night, we have partial and unofficial returns from the whole State except New-London county-from that not a word. The Courant contains details, but we have neither time to put them in type nor room for their insertion this week. The whole must be compressed in a few words.-We have the Five Congressmen heard from,

JOSEPH TRUMBULL, of Hartford county, 1080 majority over Toucey, loco.

WILLIAM L. STORRS, of Middlesex and New Haven, 339 majority over Ingham, loco. THOMAS B. OSBORNE, of Fairfield, about 400 majority over Whittlesey, loco. TRUMAN SMITH, of Litchfield, about 500 majority over Phelps, loco.

JOHN H. BROCKWAY, of Tolland & Windham, about 400 majority over Cleveland, loco. El!sworth's majority over Niles for Governor.

In Hartford county, 1155 In New-Haven county, about 400 In Litchfield county, In Fairfield county, so far, 417 385 In Windham county, 161 In Tolland county, 266 -2784Niles' majority in Middlesex co. 173

Ellsworth's majority, so far, 2611 This, though not so large as last year, is sufficiently "healthy" to be permanent.

As to the Legislature, the Courant states that there are of the Senate 13 out of the 18 heard from who are whigs-and 89 whigs to 57 locos in the House. Glory enough for this year! What do "Niles' Cattle" think of it? What does he think of the "stubble field" of loco focoism being burned over "two years in succession"!!

D Postscript.—We have a few returns by way of New-York, from New-London county. The opinion is expressed that Thomas W. WILLIAMS, the whig candidate for Congress, is chosen by about 150 majority. This gives us the ENTIRE DELEGATION TO CON-GRESS! Glory enough!

New-Hartford has come up to the scratch gloriously. She gave out the challenge that she would give the largest whig majority of any town in the county-and she has done it. Harwinton, Torrington, Goshen, Barkhamsted, Watertown, Cornwall, Plymouth, have done well, and, considering the "principalities and nowers," the whole loco foco array of the county with which she had to contend, bearing down upon her, Litchfield too has done well. So also have many of the minority towns-Salisbury, Warren, Bethlem, Woodbury, indeed all, have fought manfully in the glorious cause, and assisted in rescuing our county from the disgrace of being represented by such O's as either of the Phelps's. Litchfield county now stands on impregnable ground, from which she will not soon be moved by the myrmidons of locofocoism-and will soon be represented on the floor of Congress by a man who will reflect credit upon her choice.

Presiding Officers! Mark well!-By the law of the last session it is required that the votes for Sheriff in the several counties shall be returned to the Secretary of State within ten days after the election. It will be well for the presiding officers in the several towns to bear this in mind, and to see the returns forwarded in due season.

MORUS MULTICAULIS.

Extract of a letter from Rev. W. W. Bostwick, of Hammondsport, Steuben County, New-York, to a gentleman in this village.

- "But one bud is necessary for a cutting, un less the wood is very small and slender, in which case, if cut into pieces of but a single bud, there may not be sufficient substance in the wood to support the cutting till it grows-cuttings that are I-8 of an inch in diameter, I would give two buds; and in some cases, where the wood is larger than this, but the buds very near together, as half or three-fourths of an inch. it is well to leave two buds. Cutting of one inch in length of good sound wood will grow without any difficulty.

I cut my stalks, beginning at the bottom, and proceeding up as far as the wood is sound, cutting half an inch above the bud a little sloping. The extremities, which are light and spongy, and also the small side shoots, I think best not to cut, but lay them down whole, and cover with an inch of earth. I dip the ends in pitch or rozin, tempered with a little tallow, (the common grafting wax is very good for this purpose,) melted, but not so hot as to injure the cutting; by so doing fewer of them will perish.

When I plant the cuttings in open ground, I plant them in rows about two feet apart, and six or eight inches spart in the row, sticking them down a little slanting to the north, the bud on the south side so deep that the upper end will be a little below the surface. say half an inch, pressing the earth about the cutting It is important that the ground should be kept moist and to this end, they must be watered when the ground gets dry-to prevent the earth drying and baking, put along each side of the row some grass or other litter close to the cuttings. The time to set them is in May, when the ground gets warm, and they will come up in the course of two weeks, though some of them will be longer.

I think that more and better trees may be raised from cuttings than by laying them down whole .-When laid down whole, some of the buds do not start ; of those that do, a few take the lead at the expense of others, which are stinted and small-also they are mostly straight shoots or stems without any side bran-ches—whereas those from cuttings having more room, grow larger, and put out numerous side branches. Now let me tell you my way of raising cuttings, which I think the best of all. I make one or more hotbeds in the ordinary way, about the first of April, with about two feet depth of fresh stable manure, fine and coarse shook together, and packed even with a fork, and by gently treading on it-a foot and a half wider and longer than the frame. Where I make the bed. I excavate the earth about the depth of a spade as a pit for the manure-put on the sash, and when warm, cover with soil five or six inches deep-level it and prepare to plant the cuttings. I cut sods of grass in bits two inches square ; in the centre of these make a hole with a sharp stick, a little sloping, and insert the cutting so that the bud will be on the upper side of the slope, and a little within the sod, the grass side of the sod being down. These are then placed close together on the surface of the bed; the point of the cutting to the north, and the bud on the south side, and covered with halt or three-fourths of an inch of fine mould hand—the whole then watered, and the sash put on ;

and in one week the shoots from the buds will begin to appear, and keep coming up for two or three weeks. In warm days, the beds are to be aired by shoving the sash, and shaded from the middle of the forencon to the middle of the afternoon from the sun, and watered every other day at evening-the beds covered at night when cold and frosty. By the 20th of May, when the frosts are over, the plants will have attained a height of six or eight inches, and are carefully taken up with the bits of sod, and planted in rows two feet apart and eight or ten inches in the row. By thus proceeding you will not lose as many cuttings as by planting them in the open ground-it will be much less labor to water them-you can feed earlier, and the trees will grow larger, and the wood become more matured."

REPLY.

Litchfield, March 17th, 1839. GENTLEMEN—The use which the partiality of friends has made of my name in reference to the approachhas made of my name in reference to the approaching election would, according to one of the ancient customs of New-England, impose on me profound silence touching all matters which have a bearing on the issue that is shortly to be decided by the people. This custom was established by men of singular wisdom and sagacity, upon the idea that much more confidence is to be reposed in the general character of a candidate, and the principles, views, and motives which have usually actuated his conduct than upon any thing which he can offer on the eve of an exciting election.

ting election. The acquisition of a knowledge of these particulars The acquisition of a knowledge of these particulars has recently been greatly facilitated by a division of the State into Congressional Districts, and no man can now become, with us, a candidate for Congress without being within striking distance of every elector in the County. For my part, I am free to say, that if I thought I could not trust a candidate upon the general considerations above indicated, I should place no reliance on a special declaration of sentiment, which, in too many cases, will be adroitly drawn up with a view, if possible, to please some, and offend none.

But there is a much more serious topic to which I

But there is a much more serious topic to which I must advert, and that is, the construction which would must advert, and that is, the construction which would certainly be given to a categorical answer to your inquiries. It would be considered a solemn pledge, from which there could be no departure without incurring the stigma of perfidy. I cannot believe that you either expect or wish me togive any such pledge, or to do any thing to contravene the principle (upon which every deliberative assembly is organized,) that mutual consultation and grave deliberation should pre-cede decision. In addition to this, it is well known that the community is much divided on the subject of slavery—not as to the enormity of the evil, but as to the adaptation of certain means for its extinction to the end proposed. A large and very respectable class of my fellow citizens believe that this institution (if it may be called such.) is so wrought into the constitution of society in the slaveholding States, is so entrenched behind a variety of barriers, and is surrounded by such a vast mass of combustible materials. rounded by such a vast mass of combustible materials, that we can gain access to it only with much difficulty, and that many interesting considerations require us to act with the utmost prudence and caution.

Another class, equally respectable, whose rectitude of motive and philanthropy of purpose I never doubted, consider slavery a vicious and unseemly excrescence on the body politic, contaminating the whole system, and producing intolerable irritation in all its parts, for which there is no other sections. which there is no other safe or practicable remedy dinte excision. eed I inquire whether it would not be presumptuous for me to pronounce per-emprorily between these opinions, when I have not felt myself called upon, until the present moment, to give the subject much consideration?

Bu: I feel no difficulty in communicating my views touching questions of indisputable right; where there can be neither concession nor compromise, and such other matters as are of a nature so plain and palpable that the whole community, especially with us, will be likely to unite in the same result.

likely to unite in the same result.

I can therefore say that, in common with those who have had an agency in bringing my name before the public, I consider slavery as a great and crying evil, the abrogation of which is a "consummation devoutly to be wished," that it is a sad commentary on those principles of freedom and equality which were inscribed by our ancestors as a frontlet upon our institutions, that the words of the Constitution conferring upon Congress the power "to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever" over the District of Columbia are sufficiently broad to clothe that body with power to annihilate, (should they deem it expedient,) this evil at the seat of Government, that the introduction of a foreign, independent and sovereign columbia are sufficiently broad to clothe that body with power to annihilate, (should they deem it expedient,) this evil at the seat of Government, that the introduction of a foreign, independent and sovereign State into our Union is totally unauthorized by the Constitution, and, if it were otherwise, the measure would be inexpedient if the effect would be to extend and aggravate the disease which all would extirpate, if possible, from our system, and especially do I think that the people should enjoy the unalienable rights of speech, petition, and the press, that these sacred immunities ought not to be trifled with, nor frittered away, that no tyrannous majority should establish an "Atherton gag," nor lawless mob trample under foot peaceable and unoffending citizens assembled to concentrate upon the dark recesses of slavery all the effulgence of reason, religion, and truth.

With respect to the admission of new States tolerating slavery to a participation of the blessings of the federal compact, I would observe, that no such application will be made, except by the territory of Florids, for many years to come, and if she shall present herself, as Arkansas did, with a constitution denying to her Legislature the power of emancipation, and passing an irreversible sentence of bondage against a hapless race, I should dread the responsibility of giving her a place among the stars of our Union.

But, Gentlemen, if I were to pursue the subject further, I should be in danger of trenching upon questions of expediency, in respect to which I suppose you will deem it right for me to hold myself open to receive, weigh and consider the views and opinions of all classes of my fellow citizens, and I can assure you that, should it be their pleasure to place me in a situation to act on the subjects to which you advert, and other topics of a kindred nature, I shall give such views, and opinions a respectful and candid consideration, and, having collected all the light in my power, shall endeavor (keeping in view the manifold evils

But I should not do justice either to my own feelings or the occasion, if I did not advert to other evils little less atrocious than slavery itself. Permit me to inquire whether, if we cannot check the downward tendency of things in this country, and that right little less atrocious than slavery itself. Permit me to inquire whether, if we cannot check the downward tendency of things in this country, and that right speedily, there will be much of liberty left worth possessing for men of any complexion, for either white or black? When I contemplate the extinction of a large share of that old fashioned patriotism and disinterestedness which once pervaded the ention, and marked the conduct of public men, and consider the venality and spoile grasping propensity with which multitudes are infected; when I recur to the prodigality of the government, the millions which are squandered year after year, the manner in which the public treasure is plundered, and the often recurring cases of breaches of trust and violation of official duty; when I recollect the licentiousness of the public press, the persevering efforts made in certain quarters to mislead and debauch the public mind, and the foul assaults made day by day upon estimable private character, upon men whose only offence is a disposition to stay the rushing tide of inquity; when I witness the constant appeals made to the worst passions of the human heart, and even see men occupying stations of high responsibility trying to awaken jealousies, and sow dissentions between different classes of society; when I observe the recklessness and the law-contemning spirit that prevails throughout the length and breadth of the land; when the ancient maxims of republicanium are forgotten if not contemned, and multitudes no longer dread the accumulation of inordinate power in the hands of the Executive; when a system is organized to subdue and control public sentiment, and the President wields the immense influence of his name, and the enormous patronage of his station to carry it into effect; when the mercenaries of this administration are every where present, busy in establishing presses, and supplying them with the necessary aliment, prompt at interfering with elections, and ever assiduous to defend the policy of the government, irrespective of the mcrits of that policy; when the people themselves are treated with the greatest obloquy for an independent exercise of the elective franchise, and our rulers stigmatize them as BANK-BOUGHT, nay as BRUTE BEASTS, led unconsciously to the polis, and the opinions and wishes of our State assemblies, deliberately expressed, and openly derided, and laughed to scorn; when there has been within a few years past a rapid deterioration of sound moral principles, and vice every where obtrudes upon us its hideous front; when the sacred day is desecrated even by our national Legislature, and frightful crimes have become matter of familiar occurrence; and when, moreover, with these dark shades are grouped all the contaminating and perverting influences of slavery itcontaminating and perverting influences of slavery it self—I must confess that I feel alarmed—"the sign self—I must confess that I feel alarmed—" the signs of the times" seem to me to be portentous, and I cannot help recollecting that the experience of the world proves that public liberty inevitably falls with public virtue. What then shall we do? How shall we resist this dreadful proclivity to evil? Shall the uncontaminated portion of society break off into separate and distinct parties, and thus render their strength comparatively insignificant? Is virtue, intelligence, and patriotism to be thus disarmed and made powerless; are the good and wise to assume an attitude of implactable hostility to each other because they caunot are the good and wise to assume an attitude of implacible hostility to each other because they cannot think alike as to the treatment of a particular disease, with which the body politic is afflicted? Not such is the conduct of those who hold in their grasp the elements of mischief—they are united as one man; not a straggler is permitted to leave the ranks, and the whole array bears down upon the country with a force which nothing but the best energies of her virtuous sons, thoroughly concentrated, can resist.

From these remarks, you will infer the opinion

From these remarks, you will infer the opinion which is respectfully submitted) that a member of our national councils should be entrusted with a large discretion. The idea of felling all the evils herein indicated, at a single stroke, is chimerical. He should be permitted to select the point of attack and plant the blow where it will be most felt. I will only add that, if the principles herein avowed are not conceded to me, it is better that I should remain (however proud I might be to represent my native county on the floor of Congress,) where my true interests invite, in pri-

What does this Mean ?- The Madisonian of Tues day, while discussing some of the parliamentary prac-tices of the Senate, indulges in the following extraordinary paragraph:
"While on the subject, we should feel that we had not quite discharged our duty, were we not to notice another circumstance which we regard as more dis-gusting than the others. We have an undying hor-ror of drunkenness. It is a vulgar beastliness, in vio-lation of the laws of nature, and the ordinances of Heaven; we regard it as a sin against oneself, against society and against decency. It is diagusting and afflicting enough in the utmost retirement of private life, but when it invades the national Legislature, and reels, and fumes, and slobbers, in that once high place, before the gaze of the world, we regard it really and sincerely, in a moral point of view, as a public crime, and one which derives additional turpitude from the fact of its imposing its responsibility in some sortupon the public, of its endangering the public trusts, and of its setting an eminent example of debauchery to the millions of people who look to the Legislature for the dignities, the proprieties, in a word, for the deportment of citizenship. We forbear to develope farther the scene yet vivid in our mind."
